 *Cash Prize & Certificate of Appreciation will be provided to top scorers

INTERNATIONAL MICROORGANISM DAY

September 17th is celebrated as the International Microorganism Day since 2017 to commemorate the milestone year of 1683 when Anton van Leeuwenhoek for the first time wrote a letter to Britain's Royal Society describing the "animalcules" which he had observed under the microscope as the first known description of bacteria.

Let us all take this day as an opportunity to raise awareness towards the significant contribution of microorganisms in our lives especially in the present times when a virus has made the world look them even more negative. These invisible ones are mightier than one can imagine and hence its the time to make everyone aware. Microbial Literacy in the society is the need of the hour if we dream a sustainable future.
