World Wetlands Day: DU plans the day innovatively

Vinay Prasad, a DU student, at a plantation drive

We will post a quiz on Insta to educate people on wetlands.
SHIKHA GOYAL, Student, National Institute of Technology

Shikha Goyal, a final-year student of BA (Hons) Economics and president of Green Benas Society, the Environment Club of Kurukshetra College, says, "This year, we will be focusing on climate change and its impact on wetlands, as it is in line with the SDGs (sustainable development goals) released in 2015-20. We have around 2-3% of wetlands every year. We want to spread awareness about wetlands and how to preserve them. We will be sharing a series of Instagram and Facebook posts on the economic impact of wetlands, and efforts by local communities to preserve them."

Agar's focus on spreading information about wetlands, Nature clubs are making organised efforts to revive and clean barren land and water bodies across the city. "Around 50 volunteers from our society have been planting trees across small water bodies in Delhi and other cities, as a part of a recent plantation drive for World Wetlands Day. The drive began on January 28 and concludes today. We also aim to spread awareness on wetland protection through videos on our social media handles," shares Jyoti Kataria, a second-year BCom (Prog) student and president of Prithvi Society for Environment of Sri Aurobindo College.

"We will be targeting Bharat sites in different parts of India, such as Chilika Lake in Odisha, Keoladeo in Andhra Pradesh and the recently designated Bharat site, Sultanpur National Park, in Gurgaon," says Shachi, a final-year BA (Prog) student and president of Benas. The Eco Club of Kirori Mal College, A Bharat Site is a wetland site designated to be of international importance. Historically, February 2 also marks the date of adoption of the Convention on Wetlands in the Italian city of Ramsar. She further adds, "We will be doing research and informing people about where these places are located."

Ananya Panwar, a final-year BA (Hons) Bcom student and president of Panchajanya, The Environment Society of Hindu College says, "A lot of urban population that resides around wetlands uses pesticides, which harm aquatic life and negatively impact the water quality. We are going through blogs and research articles on the internet about it. We are working for the Covid-19 situations to improve belief we visit these sites."
