About the Faculty Development Programme

The year 2020 has witnessed unprecedented health problems due to the worldwide spread of Covid-19. The situation has significantly affected all aspects of our lives including the areas of teaching and learning. The need to maintain physical distancing has put severe restrictions on the traditional methods of teaching and learning. However, to ensure that the teaching-learning process is not curtailed, it is important to prepare ourselves for alternative methods of communication that rely heavily on electronic communication i.e. the Internet and the use of digital tools for information storage, visualisation and communication, commonly referred to as Information and Communication Technology (ICT). Training in these tools of communication is the need of the hour. It is also essential that their usage be popularised for the benefit of all stakeholders of our ecosystem.

The objective of this programme is to equip the educators in understanding, using and popularising the various elements of this alternative method of ICT assisted teaching and learning. IQAC & UGC-PARAMARSH of Kirori Mal College, University of Delhi is organising an online Faculty Development Programme on the following theme:

The five-day long webinar analysed the philosophy and methodology implicit in Mahatma Gandhi’s century old journey which is still relevant. Mahatma Gandhi, the Father of the Nation has inspired generations, not just in India but all over the world to walk on the path of peaceful conflict resolution. Martin Luther King Jr., Dalai Lama, Nelson Mandela, Khan Abdul Ghaffar Khan, Aung San Suu Kyi are just to name a few who have acknowledged the influence of Mahatma Gandhi in shaping them. In this context, the life and vision of Mahatma Gandhi is more relevant today than ever before, especially in the arena of peace and conflict resolution. The webinar offered a scholarly, critical, and nuanced perspective on Gandhi, who is increasingly being studied as a philosopher, religious thinker, and critic of industrial modernity. The webinar provided an ideal opportunity to uphold and renew Gandhi’s ideals for the promotion of his principles of nonviolence, tolerance and justice, and for a focus on the problems of the poor and needy in the world. The five-day long event, consisted of 4 lectures covering various aspects of Gandhian principles. The last day of the webinar was open for the participants who had attended the lecture series on Gandhian principles.
